

There is love to be found in the library,
As soon as you walk through the door.
You're faced with a place,
A wonderful space
For learning and books, fun and more.

There is love to be found in the library,
As you walk down through the hall.
Adventures everywhere,
While you sit on your chair
And see places you've ne'er seen before.

There is love to be found in the library,
With all the books lining the shelves.
As you walk through the aisle,
You can dream off and smile,
And into a book you can delve.

There is love to be found in the library,
With all sorts of genres galore.
You can pick, you can choose,
You can ponder and muse.
You can grab any book to explore.

There is love to be found in all libraries
And love in the books themselves.
And perhaps if you try
One day your name might
Appear on a book on those shelves.
